

MY EXPERIENCE IN

LONDON

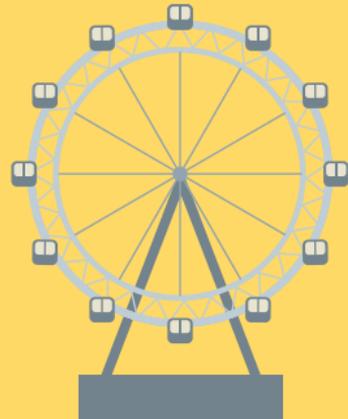

My experience in London

I woke up at 3:30 a.m. and prepared to go to London. At 4 p.m., I arrived at the parking lot where we boarded the bus to London. The bus left around 4:30 a.m. for France, where we planned to board a train that would transport us under the sea to London. On the bus, I was still sleepy, so I tried sleeping so that I would have enough energy for the lengthy walk in London. The train ride did not take long at all; it took a maximum of 40 minutes.

We had done quite a bit of walking on the first day. We took a boat and sailed down the Thames, which was a lot of fun. We went to see Big Ben. It was a stunning structure, in my opinion. We also went to the London Eye. It was a massive Ferris wheel located near the River Thames. I had lunch at Burger King in the afternoon and it was delicious. I was worried that they wouldn't understand me when I made my order, but everything went smoothly. I asked for a burger and he said what else I wanted. Everything I said was understood by him. After the conversation, I felt quite good. I was happy that everything had gone so well. I went to an M&M store after dinner. I purchased a large quantity of chocolate as well as other keepsakes. Because it was a very costly buy, I am unlikely to return. Then we went to the British Museum, which was fairly impressive. There were many old works of art from the past, which I enjoyed viewing.

We also visited the National Gallery, which was a wonderful experience. There were numerous paintings that were quite magnificent. The Sunflower, by Vincent van Gogh, is one of my favourite works of art.

The youth hostel where we stayed was not one of my favourite things in London. The beds were fairly hard, and the room was really hot. You couldn't take a shower in the morning because there weren't enough showers available. All of the food was completely gone when we went to eat breakfast. After a while, I think they should replenish it. The chocolate milk was nothing more than water mixed with cacao powder. It wasn't at all pleasant.

On the second day, we went to watch Matilda the Musical. It was my favourite London stop. The actress who played Matilda could sing beautifully, and the rest, of course. It was entertaining to watch them dance and sing at the same time. It was a show that you could get a lot of enjoyment out of. A Jack the Ripper walk was also done. Our tour guide told us more about Jack the Ripper and the people he murdered. We had a long walk ahead of us, and every time we came to a halt, he told us more about Jack the Ripper. In addition, he displayed photographs of the victims. They were filthy, unappealing images. That didn't sit well with me.

I had a great time on the trip and saw a lot of new things. I'd like to return at some point in the future.
